POLITICS CAUSES A RUMPEL.

The Veterans Rush From the Pavilion When Baker Speaks.

One of the most stirring incidents of the reunion occurred yesterday afternoon. General B. M. Prentiss gave an address on Shiloh, and incidentally interpolated a few sentences scoring the alliance, remarking that the alliance leaders were the men who inaugurated the war of the rebellion. His speech was cheered to the echo. When he had concluded, a few alliance men who were present asked that they be permitted to put up a man to answer Prentiss, which the management permitted, and congressman Baker of the sixth district of Kansas, who was to speak anyhow, was put forward to answer General Prentiss.

The pavilion was jammed to suffocation when Mr. Baker began his speech, and for the first two minutes he was listened to with interest, but he began to talk about Kansas mortgages after that and the veterans began to leave. The louder and more vindictive Mr. Baker talked the faster the veterans left. They hissed, groaned and finally made one grand break to get out, fairly tumbling over each other in the rush. Outside excited knots gathered and talked angrily about the bad taste of talking politics at a reunion and a body of old soldiers went to the management and demanded that they keep the "calamity howlers" off the platform or they would leave in a body.

When Mr. Baker began there were nearly 4,000 people in the pavilion. When he concluded there were probably 175 persons left and they were mostly women. One person on the platform applauded Mr. Baker's utterances, and except that not a ripple of applause was heard. Mr. Baker expressed his regret and seemed worried over it.—Kansas City Star.

What steam is to the engine, Hood's Sarsaparilla is to the body, producing bodily power and furnishing mental force.

TASCOTT CAPTURED.

The Murderer of Millionaire Snell Arrested in South Carolina.

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 19.—W. B. Tascott has been arrested. He is to-night locked up in the police station at Bamberg, this state, where he was taken into custody today at the request of a traveling companion. The men came into town as tramps, and the chances are they will go out honored, as there is little doubt in the minds of the Bamberg police that they have the right man. This morning two common, ordinary, everyday-looking tramps walked into town. No attention was paid to them. A little later one of them presented himself at police headquarters and made an announcement that took away the breath of the chief, when he said that he was a Chicago detective, and that his companion was W. B. Tascott, the murderer of A. J. Snell in Chicago on February 8, 1888. He asked that an officer be detailed to go with him to arrest Tascott, as he apprehended a fight. Policemen Cave, the giant of the force, was sent on the mission. Presently the men returned with their prisoner. The man arrested says his name is Hardin; that he was born in Dallas, Texas, and raised in Auburn, Ala., where he attended college. He denies ever having been to Chicago or even in Illinois. He says he is a bartender and that a protracted spree is the cause of his being on the road. Despite this story, the man tallies exactly with the description of Tascott published from Chicago even to the tattoo marks. He is about 26 years of age. The police authorities telegraphed at once to the police of Chicago. Hardin appears to be quite intelligent.

Bradfield's Female Regulator.

Has won, on merit alone, a widespread and enduring reputation. It is combination of vegetable agents, the result of the experience of one who made the diseases of women a life-long study. Taken according to directions the organs awake to new life and energy, leaving the woman free from pain at these periods.

MADE DESPERATE BY WANT.

Frightful Reports of Tragedies Due to Starvation.

London, Sept. 9.—From Kieff comes the account of a horrible tragedy. A Jew named Kaplan, driven to desperation by an order to leave Russia, he having been deprived of a comfortable business by a former decree, first shot his wife and then one by one, his five children. He afterwards killed himself.

Kaplan left a note stating the motive for the crimes, which was his desire to save his family from inevitable misery.

From other parts of Russia comes the news of tragedies attendant on the failure of the harvest and the consequent suffering and struggle for existence. While no cases of cannibalism have been reported, there have been several cases of mysterious disappearance that are attributed to suspected cannibalism, and in Bessarabia the police are carefully watching for evidence against persons under suspicion. Many suicides are stated to have occurred among the peasantry who, owing to a strong religious feeling, have been as a rule slow to commit the act. There is nothing reassuring in the Russian advice, and the prospect for them this winter is too terrible to contemplate.

An epidemic of diphtheria is raging in the province of Tambof, Russia. Mothers purposely place their children in the way of infection preferring to see them die of disease than to see them starve.

The distress of the people is so great and the need of money so urgent that foals can be bought from the farmers at one shilling each.

The Country Editor.

The country editor deserves a good deal more consideration than he generally receives. He renders service of surprising value, for which he rarely or never gets reasonable credit. There is no other man in a community who does so much work for so little pay, or who is so willing to subordinate private interest to public necessity or advantage. He lies awake of nights to devise means of making himself useful to his town. His paper is a source of constant benefit to its readers as an advocate of everything that is calculated to promote their welfare and prosperity. It is out of the question for him to acquire wealth, or even put aside a moderate surplus for a rainy day. He is content if he can make a living. When he does more than that the balance goes to the improvement of his paper, and so the people get the profit after all. He does not expect a just and fair return for his labor, like men engaged in other kinds of business. The force of custom and tradition obliges him to be everybody's servant in a certain sense, and to seize every chance of assisting other people in their various enterprises and ambitions. He must study to please his patrons by making himself a practical help to them. This is the test of his ability and the measure of his popularity. In short, he is the best existing illustration of the theory of recompense that makes virtue its own reward.

There is another side to the matter, however. The country editor is not a prophet without honor in his own locality. He wields a decided influence, and is frequently the controlling spirit in controversies of great pith and moment. It is his province to keep close to the people. He knows what they think and what they want. His facilities for convincing and persuading them are of a superior order, because he comes in direct contact with them and is familiar with their habits and tendencies. They read his paper with more interest than they do the metropolitan journal. The latter is not apt to speak to them with a clear comprehension of their situation, whereas the former is really a part of the system of things to which they belong. Some of the most effective work that is done in political campaigns is performed by the country editor. He is often wiser in the methods and process than his metropolitan brother; and his audience listens to him with a feeling of personal respect and confidence. Not only in politics, but in all matters of general importance, the local press is a power that is felt in a most distinct and irresistible manner. The contents of the country papers have more to do with shaping public sentiment than all the books and periodicals. It is the country editor who keeps his finger on the popular pulse in the true meaning of the term, and is acquainted with the conditions by which all issues are ultimately determined. This implies that he is not a man to be lightly regarded, but that he is entitled to generous and grateful treatment at all times and in all ways.—Globe Democrat.

In European countries they are willing to listen to the learned men from America. Prof. Curtis, the historian from Greece, is to deliver an oration on Von Moltke at the Leibnitz anniversary.

Beer in the Territory Again.

Ardmore, I. T., Sept. 10.—Attorney Warrant, for the United States has dismissed the prosecutions against the beer men of Ardmore, holding that the court had no jurisdiction, Judge Bryant refusing to allow prosecutions. This removes the embargo on the sale of beer with one exception—its liability of being destroyed by the Indian police. The Indian agent, alone in his efforts to keep beer out of the territory will not be able to accomplish much. Beer will now be sold by the fifteen saloons in Ardmore and over the nation generally.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Sam Jones, the revivalist, was conducting a meeting down in Georgia not long ago. Acres of people were before him. "I wonder," cried he, "if there are not in this great crowd some clean mouthed men who have never told a lie. If there are any moral heroes of this sort will they please rise for a moment?" There was a long pause, then one man rose timidly and stood with an air of meek yet conscious integrity, the target of ten thousand eyes. Presently another rose, and then another and another until there were nineteen on their feet. "Thank you, thank you," said the evangelist graciously to each in turn. Then he added impressively: "Will you please remain standing while the whole congregation prays for these nineteen colossal liars!" Tableau.—Republic.

ONE MASS OF SCALES.

Afflicted 3 Years by Dreadful Skin and Blood Disease, with Intense Pain and Loss of Hair.

All Other Remedies Fail. Relieved Instantly and Cured in 4 Weeks by the Cuticura Remedies.

I have a few words to say regarding the Cuticura Remedies. They have cured me in four weeks' time from a Skin and Blood disease which I have had for over three years. At certain times, my skin would be very sore, and always kept cracking and peeling off in white scales. In cold weather my face was one mass of scales. When in the cold air the pain was intense; it would burn and sting my eyes, and my blood also being in a bad condition, with loss of hair. I have tried every known remedy that was recommended to me, but it was of no use, and gave me very little benefit. So hearing of your Cuticura Remedies I concluded to give them a trial. The first application gave me almost instant relief. In a few weeks' time I found myself cured, and I am thankful for what they have done for me. Your Cuticura Remedies are a blessing to those who may have the opportunity to use them. I can recommend them to any one.
